Renaissance Accelerated Reader

www.renaissance.com

Turn Every Student Into a Successful Reader:

Accelerated Reader® from Renaissance® empowers students to take ownership of their reading practice and progress. Engaging quizzes, goal setting, and reading recommendations motivate students to read more, strengthening critical language comprehension and word recognition skills identified by the Science of Reading.

As a dynamic reading practice tool: Accelerated Reader complements and enhances structured and science-based core and supplemental curriculums by encouraging broad reading practice and engagement with texts—a critical piece of a comprehensive literacy framework. By fostering consistent reading habits, Accelerated Reader helps boost literacy growth, ensuring students build the skills they need to succeed.

Curriculum Support: Accelerated Reader supports core instruction through a wide selection of quizzes that focus on academic subjects such as social studies and science. Its wide range of quizzes enables teachers to incorporate Accelerated Reader into their instruction and improve subject matter comprehension.

Over 10,000 Accelerated Reader quizzes are available on ABDO titles – nearly 5,000 quizzes are for books published since 2015

Early Natural Disasters Encyclopedias

Grades PreK–4
Reading level: Grade 2
Early Encyclopedias

Natural disasters are powerful and dangerous. The strong winds of hurricanes and tornadoes knock down buildings. Volcanic eruptions release deadly lava and clouds of ash. Wildfires burn through forests and towns. Droughts threaten important crops. And blizzards can kill with freezing temperatures and blowing snow. This series is an engaging introduction to these topics, giving readers all they need to know about these natural disasters.

Strength in Numbers: Animal Groups

Grades 4–8
Reading level: Grade 5
Core Library

Many animals live or work in groups. Some travel in large groups to protect themselves from predators. Other animals join together to hunt. No matter their size, groups are an important part of survival for many animals. This series demonstrates the social structures of animal groups, exploring why they form and how they help different species.

Dinosaurs

"It's no secret what preschoolers will find lurking in the pages of the Dinosaurs series, each volume of which examines one type of dinosaur. Here young readers can learn about when the dinosaur lived, its body and diet, and where its fossils have been found. Hansen's writing strikes a nice balance between simple and scientific."

Dinosaurs

Grades 2–5
Reading level: Grade 3
Kids Core

From four-legged herbivores to quick-moving carnivores, many types of dinosaurs once roamed Earth. Fossils reveal what these animals may have looked like and where they lived. This series digs into the unique features and behaviors of each species, as well as how they have been represented in popular culture.

Early Natural Disasters Encyclopedias

Grades PreK–4
Reading level: Grade 2
Early Encyclopedias

Natural disasters are powerful and dangerous. The strong winds of hurricanes and tornadoes knock down buildings. Volcanic eruptions release deadly lava and clouds of ash. Wildfires burn through forests and towns. Droughts threaten important crops. And blizzards can kill with freezing temperatures and blowing snow. This series is an engaging introduction to these topics, giving readers all they need to know about these natural disasters.

Sports Video Games

Grades 3–9
Reading level: Grade 4
SportsZone

Sports video games began as humble activities with simple graphics in the 1970s and 1980s. Today, these games virtually mirror the real-life sports they celebrate. In many cases, playing sports video games has become a sport of its own. Sports Video Games introduces readers to the history of their favorite sports games.

CHAPTER 3
FIRST RECORDED SIGHTINGS
Native Americans were the first people to talk about Bigfoot. They called it Sasquatch.
In the mid-1800s, pioneer Elkanah Walker met with Native Americans in Oregon. He wrote down their stories of giants in the mountains. The Native Americans said the giants stole their fish while they slept.

TAKING THE JOB
In another version of the character, Barbara Gordon was Batgirl. Gordon's father was Gotham City's police commissioner, so she was passionate about enforcing the law. She trained in martial arts, made a Batgirl costume, and began fighting crime. After proving her skills, she began working with Batman and Robin. Her career as Batgirl came to a violent end when she was shot

★ STARRED REVIEW ★
Protesting Police Violence in Modern America
"This is a hot-button topic that inspires a lot of strong feelings, and this volume is admirable in its neutral tone, its adherence to facts, and its avoidance of bothsidesism."

In recent years, true crime podcasts and television shows such as CSI and Law & Order have exploded in popularity. People are fascinated with how law enforcement uses science to solve even the most challenging crimes.

The word forensic is from a Latin term. In ancient Rome, it meant to argue a criminal case. Today, forensic science refers to scientific evidence that can be presented in a court of law.

Forensic science is a crucial part of today's criminal justice system. It includes a huge range of fields, from the art of facial reconstruction to the laboratory science of genetic identification. Evidence helps investigators figure out how a crime happened, and maybe why it happened. Good forensic evidence can put criminals in jail or set the innocent free.

Evidence is collected at a crime scene, bagged, and sealed until forensic scientists can examine it.

Law Enforcement

The role of law enforcement in society has been front and center in recent years. This series examines the many kinds of police jobs available, from street cops to K9 handlers. Readers will discover how to become a cop, what duties cops perform, and how officers protect and serve their communities. Readers will also learn about the most up-to-date equipment and techniques to catch criminals.

The Super Bowl isn't just a big deal in the United States. It's one of the biggest sporting events in the world. It wasn't always that way, though. The first Super Bowl was played on January 15, 1967. At the time, it was called the AFL-NFL Championship Game. The NFL champion Green Bay Packers beat AFL champion Kansas City 35–10. Though that game didn't sell out, it set a foundation from which the Super Bowl grew. Great dynasties, traditions, and sideshows are all part of what makes the game such a big event.

Green Bay proved to be the first Super Bowl power when it won the next year, too. Now the trophy given to the Super Bowl winners is named after the Packers' legendary coach, Vince Lombardi. The first true Super Bowl stunner came after the 1968 season. At that point, the AFL teams

Green Bay Packers running back Elijah Pitts (22) scores a touchdown late in the third quarter of the first Super Bowl.

ONE-ON-ONE HOCKEY

Even four-on-four hockey didn't significantly reduce the number of ties, however. So the league further refined its approach. In 2005–06, the league got rid of ties. Overtime stayed the same, but if nobody scored in five minutes of play, the game would be decided by a shootout.

Shootouts had been a feature of international hockey since 1992. They were used that year at the Winter Olympics. Shootouts are an exciting way to end a hockey game. Each team picks three shooters to face the opposing goalie one-on-one. Fans usually stand and cheer as they watch their hometown team try to pull off the win.

But shootouts are also a bit random. Even the best scorers don't succeed much more than 30 percent of the time. And it narrows down an entire game into an individual contest between two players.

In the modern NHL, another innovation rewards teams for making it to overtime. The 2005–06 season also saw a new point structure. Teams still earned two points for winning

Sports Innovations

Few of today's most popular sports look exactly as they did in the past. Technology has evolved, strategies have changed, and the athletes themselves have become bigger, better, and faster. And the sports have changed right along with them. Sports Innovations examines specific advancements in these areas and the impact they've had on the games we love to watch and play.

In the 1800s, overhunting and habitat loss drove the elk in Great Smoky Mountains National Park to extinction. Rangers reintroduced elk to the park in 2001.

The park's beautiful plant life is also a draw for visitors. The park is often called Wildflower National Park due to the wildflowers that bloom year-round. The park even offers trails called Wildflower Walks that are specifically chosen for wildflower viewing.

Others are drawn to Great Smoky Mountains National Park to view the park's animals. Bird-watchers search for the park's owls and warblers, while hikers hope to catch glimpses of the park's elk herds.

Those looking for animals are advised to seek out open areas such as Cades Cove. Roaring Fork Motor Nature Trail is another popular place to spot deer, elk, black bears, raccoons, turkeys, and other wild animals.

PERSPECTIVES

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

According to Emily Davis, a former park ranger and public affairs specialist for the park, the beauty of the Great Smoky Mountains is that there's something everyone will love. She says, "Some people come to see wildflowers and wildlife, some want to challenge themselves on a new trail, some like exploring the park's history, and some want to take a scenic drive." Whatever people's interest, the park offers a wide range of activities.

HIKING AND CAMPING

Hiking and camping are among the best ways to see Great Smoky Mountains National Park up close. There are more than 800 miles (1,300 km) of hiking trails throughout the park. The trails take hikers to caves, bluffs, and old-growth forests, all while providing beautiful broadcast on FOX, one of the most-watched networks. FOX had never aired a Big Ten women's basketball game before. But Clark changed that.

Clark made the most of playing in front of a wider TV audience. On January 7, 2023, FOX aired Iowa's trip to Michigan to take on the Wolverines. Michigan was one of the best teams in the Big Ten. Clark wasn't fazed, as she scored 28 points and grabbed 8 rebounds to stun Michigan fans and lead Iowa to a 94–85 win.

Three weeks later, FOX broadcast Iowa's home game against Nebraska. This time, Iowa started out slow. The Hawkeyes didn't score a point in the game's first four minutes. With the team down 8–0, Clark hit a three to put Iowa on the board. The floodgates opened from there. Through Clark's pinpoint shooting and crisp passing, the Hawkeyes took control of the game. Clark finished with 33 points, 12 rebounds, and 9 assists to cap off another great performance.

Clark didn't hog the ball from her teammates. She tallied at least 8 assists in 11 straight games starting in early January 2023. That included a 15-assist performance at Ohio State University to hand the Buckeyes their first loss of the season. For the second season in a row, Clark led the country in assists per game.

Clark faced Cotie McMahon, right, and the Ohio State Buckeyes on January 23, 2023.

Clark continued her hot streak into the Big Ten Tournament. Thousands of fans flocked to Minneapolis,

World Explorers

"These six volumes relate the lives and accomplishments of various explorers.... Information provided is factual without resorting to hagiography."
– School Library Journal, Series Made Simple, April 2022

Travel with John Cabot across the North Atlantic, sail around the world with Sir Francis Drake, explore the ocean depths with Jacques Cousteau, and much more as daring explorers discover what lies beyond the next mountain or over the sea. Learn about each explorer's childhood and family and how he got his start in exploration. Discussion questions, informative maps, timelines, and more bring these ventures to life.

"I'm trying to find my dad," Billy said.
"Obey orders! Report to your battle station. Now!"
Billy's head reeled. He didn't need this. His fists clenched. "I'm not a sailor!"
"You what? What are you doing on my ship?"
Billy never got the chance to answer.
With earsplitting blasts, multiple explosions rocked the battleship. The Okie lurched and lurched again. Generators sputtered. The lights went out and plunged everyone into darkness.
There was a moment of silence.
Then, another explosion as a torpedo slammed home in the battleship's port side.
"It's over!" a man screamed. "Get out of here!"
Hyperventilating with fear, Billy pressed his body against the metal companionway wall. Smoke swirled, thick and choking. The air smelled like danger. He had no idea which way to go.
Sweat covered him and he tried to control his rising panic. He remembered the acronym STOP that his dad taught him: Stop! Think! Observe! Plan!
He stopped, making himself stay calm. He tried to think—he'd been here before. He knew sick bay was on this level. He observed that he could still breathe, and that the floor was dry. He made a plan. Start walking, ask for directions, get to sick bay, and find Dad.
Then, escape.
The red emergency lights flickered back on, making everything look spooky. Unfamiliar faces surrounded him, but he was relieved to be able to see again. And there was no sign of the officer who'd yelled at him.
He took another long slow breath. Feeling calmer, he spoke to the nearest man.

"Sir! Which way to the sick bay?"
The sailor pointed left. "That way. But we've got to get out. The Okie's going down."

"Maybe, but I have to find my dad." Billy headed off, stumbling down the corridor.
He reached a mess room. Water covered the floor. Oh man, this was a bad sign—the boat was taking on water. He splashed past floating dishes of toast and eggs, coffeepots, and half-full mugs. A drifting food tray carried four plates of sliced baloney covered with tomato sauce. Where on earth was the

The shoreline on their right looked close enough that maybe they had a chance of reaching it before they hit the rapids.

"I'm so sorry!" Will shouted. "I fell asleep and I forgot how close we were to the rapids!"

"Let's get out of here!" Jack shouted back.

They all had to raise their voices now because the water was becoming louder by the minute. He crouched by the engine, gripped the black handle of the pull start, and began furiously yanking.

Oak Tech was also one of the top junior high schools in the state, both academically and athletically. They were undefeated every year and always seemed to send players to the biggest and best high schools in Michigan.

People around town would frequently say, "If anyone ever wants to be an elite basketball player, he should transfer to Oak Tech."

They were one of the few schools that had money to have honors band programs, after-school STEM classes, and college prep classes. Their athletics program boasted the newest and best equipment and uniforms.

Many of my friends were jealous, but I wasn't.

Many students would leave school and transfer to Oak Tech
That school and its extracurricu like a magnet, pulling all the goo blocks to one school.

I hated the idea.

How can someone just up and leave friends of a lifetime?

When I was in the fifth grade, countless people would ask me if I planned on transferring to Oak Tech to play basketball. I have more pride in myself and my friends.

No way was I going to leave my boys to join the cocky Oak Tech Pirates. Unfortunately, not everyone felt that way.

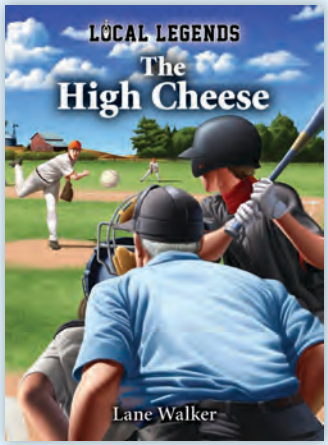

Bobby Simmons, or "B," as we called him, had been one of my best friends since the second grade. Our crew—Zeke, Alvin, Bobby, and I—were nearly inseparable. But all that would change one June day.

Back of the Net

Back of the Net centers around the intertwined lives of the players on the Mt. Pleasant High varsity soccer team. What happens on the field often reflects the ups and downs and drama of daily life. Although the players have different home lives and face challenging situations, they have one thing in common: their desire to win the state championship. But in order to win, the team members will have to not only make magic on the field, but they'll need to learn from the personal obstacles they face.

Diary of a 6th Grade Ninja

Grades 2–6
Reading level: Grade 3
Chapter Books

Chase Cooper was just another scrawny kid at his new school until a group of ninjas recruited him into their clan. It was a world of trouble he wasn't prepared for, which is why he kept a diary to warn other kids about the dangers of becoming a ninja. They say history is destined to repeat itself… well, not if Chase can help it.

while he was an evil dude, there were still rules he followed. A couple of weeks ago, I found out that one of his rules is never revealing the identity of another ninja, even if that ninja was me.

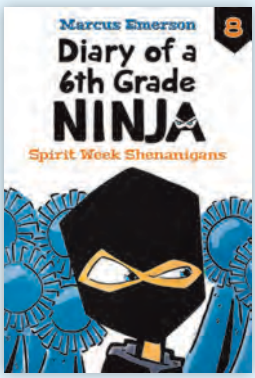

It's the ninja code, which is like the bro code, but with ninjas… except the bro code means you don't date your best friend's ex-girlfriend, sooo… the ninja code is nothing like that.

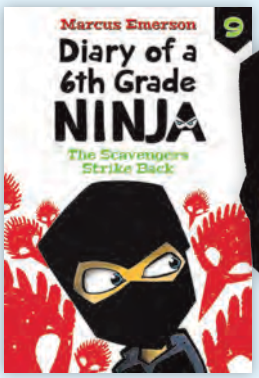

Jake had just crossed the line.

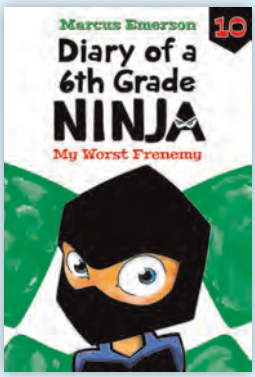

A cloud of white dust exploded at the entrance. I heard the door swing open, along with the sound of several people shuffling around. The door clicked shut again.

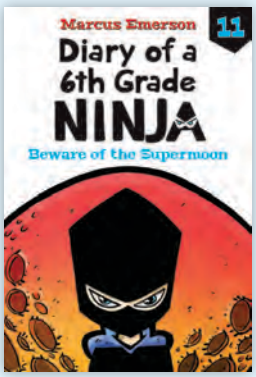

As the dust cleared, black silhouettes came into view. There must have been at least ten shadows standing near the entrance with their arms folded.

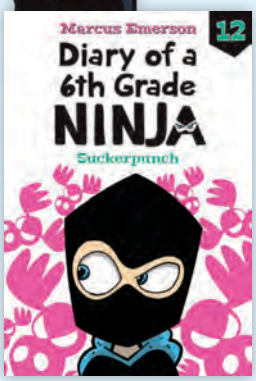

After another second, it was clear that the room was filled with new ninjas – my ninjas. That must've been why Wyatt was shocked earlier – he caught a glimpse of them when they opened the door for Daisy.

The Math Inspectors

Grades 4–7
Reading level: Grade 3
Chapter Books

Stanley, Charlotte, Gertie, Felix, and Herman are just your typical twelve-year-old kids. They love hanging out after school. They love burgers and milkshakes. And they love math. And if there's one thing they love more than math, it's solving mysteries! Thankfully their hometown has plenty of mysteries to solve.

CHAPTER SIX

SITUATION NORMAL

The four friends met at Mabel's Diner to discuss their investigation. Stanley and Charlotte had just finished reporting on their hospital visit when the chocolate milkshakes arrived. Felix's, as usual, was Mondo-sized.

Gertie looked at him with exasperation.

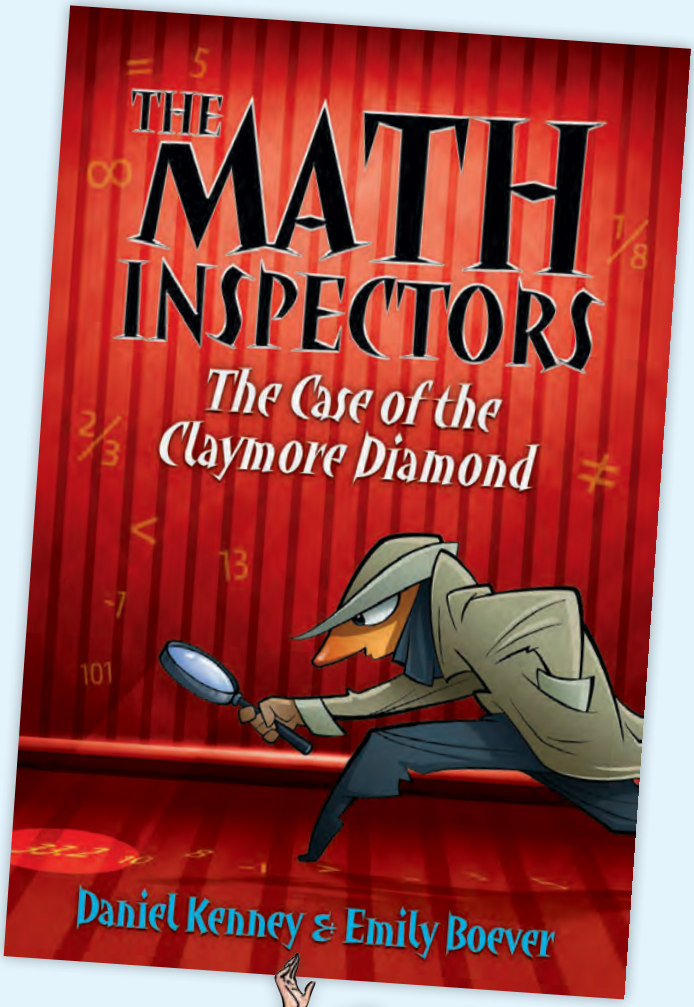

"What? I'm trying to put on some weight," he explained. "It's so hard."

Gertie squinted her eyes at him as she touched her chubby cheeks. "Yes, I don't know how you bear it. I do hate you, Felix Dervish. You know that, right?"

"Hey, you act like I wanna feel this hungry all the time."

Stanley laughed. "Well, Shaggy," he said, "what did you learn?"

"As I suspected, Mrs. Blump has been completely exonerated," Felix said, slurping his milkshake so loudly that people around the diner looked their way.

Epic Zero

All Elliott Harkness wants is to be a superhero, like his parents, older sister, and even his dog. But Elliott is a "zero"–which is super-speak for powerless. So while his family is off fighting crime, Elliott is stuck muddling through middle school. Will Elliott find the power to be the epic hero he's always wanted to be–or will he always be just an epic zero?

Chapter Eleven

Ready?" Aaron asked as we walked to the edge of the bay and prepared to dive in.

My stomach did a tiny twirl. Yes, it was spooky. Yes, the ship was surrounded by more question marks than portholes. And yes, the mysterious woman had haunted my thoughts ever since I'd seen her.

But this was an adventure. No matter what else happened, I was pretty sure we could guarantee it would be a hundred times more exciting than anything that had ever happened on any other Brightport geography field trip.

"You bet," I smiled. "Let's go."

We'd been swimming for about ten minutes. It was nearly high tide, and we'd reached the channel where I'd seen the boat yesterday.

"This is definitely where you were last time?" Aaron asked.

"Yeah, I think so, although, to be honest, with all the twists and turns, it looks pretty similar all the way along."

Shona pointed at a bunch of rocks heaped into a dome that looked like an underwater igloo. "It's the same place," she said. "I remember that."

Ivy & Bean

"The characters are appealing, the friendship is well portrayed, and the pranks and adventures are very much on grade level."
– School Library Journal, July 2006

OUT OF BUSINESS

Ivy had been practicing to become a witch for a long time. She was going to be one when she grew up, for sure. She had already learned a lot of important witch things, like spells and potions. Especially potions. Potions were fun because you had to mix ingredients to make them. Ingredients for potions were things like bugs and hair and leaf juice and rust. Ivy's collection of ingredients stood on a shelf in a special section of her room she called the magic lab.

The moment they saw each other, Bean and Ivy knew they wouldn't be friends. But sometimes the best of friends are people never meant to like each other. Vibrant characters and lots of humor make this a charming—and captivating—series.

Leela's Sweet Treats

THIS SERIES IN SPANISH SEE PAGE 150

This early chapter book series features baking enthusiast Leela Patil and her best friend Liam Katz, Taylor Elementary Green Team leader. Leela and Liam are spirited second graders living in New York City who want to make the world a little sweeter, one bake sale (and one bake sale cleanup) at a time.

Cupcake Diaries

When Dad walked out of the kitchen, I took the note out of my notebook. For the millionth time, I replayed in my head what I would say and how I would say it. I remembered how proud Dad had been of my Spanish at the tapas bar. He was going to be so disappointed in me. I dreaded giving him this note, and I dreaded telling my mom, too.

As I sat staring forlornly at the note, my dad came running back into the kitchen.

"Mia! Don't you smell that?" he shouted. I looked up, confused, and was shocked to see black smoke coming out of the oven. The cupcakes were burning! My life really was in shambles. Now I couldn't even bake cupcakes anymore. Dad quickly turned off the oven and turned to look at me.

"Mia, is something wrong? You've never burned a batch of cupcakes before—especially when you were sitting two feet away from the oven. Is there anything you want to tell me or talk about?" I couldn't put it off any longer. Taking a deep breath, I took the note from Señora Delgado and handed it to him without saying anything.

Dad read it and raised his eyebrows. "Mia, what is this? You're failing Spanish? How is that possible?"

Tears filled my eyes. I couldn't help it.

CHAPTER 12

A Really, Really Bad Day

As you can probably guess by now, I like to avoid bad situations. There didn't seem to be a time all week that I could talk to my mom. But that weekend I went to my dad's, and that's when it all came out.

It was after dinner on Friday, and I knew I had to bring up the note from Señora Delgado. But as you know, I love to put things off. So I decided to bake a batch of cupcakes first. My dad loves chocolate, so I made a quick, easy batch of chocolate cupcakes. Soon a delicious, chocolaty aroma was wafting through the entire apartment.

"Something sure smells good, mija," Dad said with a smile as he walked past the kitchen.

"They'll be ready soon," I promised.

Dino Crew

Grades PreK–3
Reading level: Grade 2
Calico Kid

The students at Dino Elementary spend their school day learning how to be the best dinosaurs they can be and their afternoons adventuring around ancient watering holes and volcanoes. The dinosaur world may seem like a long way from today, but with dino-friends Andy, Vishal, Tracy, and Brianna, it doesn't feel so far away. In each story, the Dino Crew works together to find their way through challenges big and small, including babysitting eggs and helping a clumsy Tyrannosaurus rex.

Houndsley and Catina

The subtle dance of friendship–from holding your tongue to knowing what to say–is played out in these sweetly humorous tales about an unlikely, likeable pair.

Abby and Theo have the coolest family. Rather than gather at barbeques or plan beach vacations, the Winstons investigate the spooky stories and unsolved mysteries of their town, Murky Creek. Grandpa Winston started the tradition, and now he's passing it on to Abby and Theo! When odd goings-on and suspicious happenings plague the citizens of Murky Creek, it's up to the two kids to dig up clues and crack the case before things get any creepier.

Chapter Books

Your readers will sink their teeth into this hilarious, action-packed middle grade series that turns classic monsters into the most unexpected heroes ever. Bram Murray is a foster kid who thought he was different. He never imagined that he's the world's last living vampire—or that he's being hunted! After escaping a werewolf ambush, Bram discovers the Van Helsing Academy, a secret school that trains monsters to protect the humans who fear them. But the kids will have to figure out how to use their supernatural powers fast because the Dark Ones have returned. They're trying to resurrect Count Dracula to conquer the world! Can Bram and his friends save humanity—or will they unleash more Monster Problems?

The Mutant Critter Sitter

Chloe's summer is off to a great start—until her skateboard breaks. Her dad tells her to get a summer job to learn responsibility and earn enough money for a new one. Chloe finds part-time work as a lab assistant to a not-so-mad scientist, but she never could have prepared for the gene-spliced mutant creatures she has to take care of! It's like pet sitting, but way weirder.

CHAPTER TWO
A Family Resemblance

Abandoning all attempt at stealth, Jake tore off through the market. He leaped a barrel, ducked behind a stack of squawking crated chickens, then sprinted past the tulip lady.

"Stop that boy! Stop, thief!"

He glared over his shoulder as Harris the Fleman joined the fox-hunt. Rushing out of his stall, he pointed after Jake. "Constable Flanagan! It's that blasted Reed boy again!"

The next thing he knew, the bobbies were blowing their whistles fiercely, on the chase. Jake cursed, inspired by the thought of Newgate Prison to move with even greater speed. He zipped around stalls, dodged under display stands, spooked the donkey hitched to the tea-cart as he vaulted a row of hay bales, and scrambled on.

Racing out into the wide, open square around the market, he finally found a bit of luck. Dani's wild elder brothers were loitering out on the benches with their gang and their loudmouth girls—as bad grownup troublemakers as he was the junior sort.

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John O'Dell usually gave him an affectionate smack in the head when they saw him, but this was sport the Irish boy-o's could appreciate. "Run, Jakey-lad! Give 'em what-for! Go, go!"

They laughed and cheered him on as he ran past, then helpfully misdirected Constable Flanagan and his bobbies.

The O'Dell boys ignored the black-clad thugs, but surely, Jake thought, the strangers would not dare follow him into the rough rookery neighborhood.

It was a treacherous place to go if you didn't belong, with

"Get back here, you brat!" the man snarled.

Ha, thought Jake, his head starting to pound after using his strange talent to steal the pie. He tried to blink the throbbing pain away and barreled on, but the dizziness was getting worse.

At the four-way intersection, he ducked into the alley to the right. Just around the corner, he pressed his back against the wall; chest heaving, he glanced around, needing some kind of distraction to shake them off.

He hesitated to use his powers again, knowing it would only add to his sick feeling. But what choice did he have?

He brought up his hand just like he had practiced back at his hideaway. He concentrated on a distant garbage bin and summoned up all his mental focus.

Pah! He suddenly flung his fingers like you might flick water droplets off your hand. At once, the garbage bin clattered onto its side as if someone had kicked it.

A dog began barking at the disturbance.

The ruse worked. His pursuers raced off in the direction of the noise. At once, he pressed away from the wall and continued running down the alley to the right.

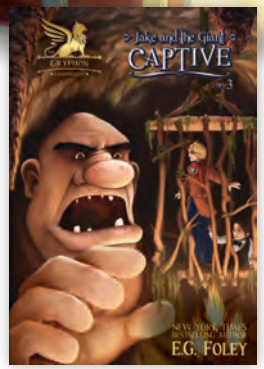

Unfortunately, it didn't take long for the strangers to re

Abby didn't have a specific destination in mind, but she would know it when she saw it. She really should have done more research about Seattle, but it wasn't as though she had known she was about to stuff James in the trunk of Dan's car and drive to the city. That wasn't something you did if you had a real, thought-out plan.

Abby, Tom, and Dan had stopped in Seattle on their way to Hawthorne Harbor. They had spent an afternoon walking around some of the big touristy spots, like the Seattle Center with the Space Needle, and that weird-looking music history museum. They also made their way through Pike Place Market—that little collection of shops and booths that sold everything from pirozhki and used books, to smelly incense and glass hookahs.

Dan had insisted that they go see the fish vendors throw salmon through the air. Tom

Invisible Six

Six secret operatives are the military's top experts in covert ops and rescue missions. But this elite special force doesn't exist—at least not in the public eye. No one knows where they come from or to where they return. The group gathers for the most dangerous, most difficult, most important missions and often operate in extreme conditions. They are known only by their code name: Invisible Six.

by a boulder or squat behind some scrub brush.

A yellow flame suddenly raced across the desert from the east. It struck a truck. Another fierce explosion echoed.

Bicep keyed the intercom. "Not an IED, but a missile. We're under missile attack!"

"Get some suppressing fire on the shooters," ordered the XO.

Bicep's eyes traced the missile's path back to its source. A puff of smoke wafted from behind a cluster of desert willows. He pressed the machine-gun trigger, sending a stream of .50-caliber bullets into the low, bushy trees. Other Stryker gunners did the same.

A third missile arrived, this time from the west. An armored vehicle shuddered. It absorbed the heavy blow and burst into flames. Bicep redirected his fire.

Captives of the Reich

Grades 4–9
Reading level: Grade 5
Claw

This series traces the tormented paths of an American special operative, a French saboteur, a Jewish resistance fighter, and a Polish farmer as they navigate the heartbreaking social and political upheavals of World War II. Their stories converge when they end up at a brutal Nazi death camp in the heart of Poland, where trainloads of men, women, and children perished during the Holocaust. As the four together face executions, disease, betrayals, and more, they learn to unite around an enduring commitment to human dignity and a quest to escape at all costs.

Stars of Ara

漫画 MANGA

Every year, the Ara School of Magic searches for the next generation of witches to train. Graduates go on to serve in castles or set up reputable magic shops across the land. For years, Namu has been training in secret—not always with success. But this year, Namu feels ready. She's perfected a spell that's bound to impress the judges and land her a spot at Ara. And once her tenure begins, she vows to rise through the ranks to become the top student at the school. But there's more to the school than the fame behind the name—a secret that could unravel everything.
